

BudgetWise – Privacy Policy

What this app does?

This app acts like a calculator for your wallet, helping you budget your daily expenses.

What information do we collect?

You need to be signed in with a Microsoft account in order to use BudgetWise. If you sign in to Windows with a Microsoft account, you'll automatically be signed in to BudgetWise with that account, and relevant information from your Microsoft account will be available in those apps. For example, if you have a username associated with your Microsoft account, your username will automatically be available in the 'Account' option under the settings charm. Information associated with your Microsoft account is subject to the Microsoft Services Agreement. To learn more about Microsoft's privacy practices regarding information associated with your Microsoft account, see the Microsoft account section of the Windows Services privacy statement.

Information from third-party accounts that you connect to your Microsoft account will also be available in BudgetWise. For example, if you've connected your Microsoft account to your Facebook account, the People app will automatically display your Facebook contacts. Information you share with a third-party service is subject to the third party's privacy statement.

When you sign in to BudgetWise with an account, content from the account is periodically downloaded in the background to keep your PC in sync.

As you use BudgetWise, the information you enter into the app will be sent to the application's mobile service for storage and can be viewed later on demand.

NOTE: Only the account you use with BudgetWise can edit and view the information entered by that particular account.

If your PC is running Windows 8 or Windows RT, see the Windows Live supplement to the Microsoft.com privacy statement.

What do we use your information for?

Any of the information we collect from you may be used in one of the following ways:
